Activity: Seed Bombs

In this episode, we learned how Flying Foxes help propagate the planet with their poop. That's some powerful poop! These DIY seed bombs pack an equally powerful punch when it comes to seed propagation.

Materials:

- Construction paper
- Bowl
- Water
- Blender
- Wildflower seeds

Wow- To:

Step 1: Start by tearing up the paper and putting it into a bowl.

Step 2: Cover the shredded paper with water and leave it to absorb for about half an hour.

Step 3: Put the wet paper mixture into a blender and blitz until it forms a wet pulp. If needed, you can add a little more water.

Step 4: Pour pulp back into the bowl, add your seeds and mix thoroughly.

Step 5: Scoop up a pinch of the pulp and seed mixture (around the size of a large marble) and form it into a ball by rolling the mixture gently between the palms of your hands.

Step 6: You can plant your seed bombs in the ground right away (follow any directions that came with the seeds) or let them dry and save for later. You'll just need to give them a good soak before planting them.
