

THE W.O.W. GUIDE TO CAMPING INDOORS

Ahh, the great indoors. The sights, the sounds, the...air conditioning. There's nothing quite like it. Here are some six tips to help you make the most of your indoor camping experience!

Pack your backpack! - Before heading IN for your indoor camp-in, be sure to pack a backpack with everything you could possibly need. This includes snacks, clean undies, a sleeping bag and pillow, and always an extra roll of toilet paper. Hey! Ya never know when you're gonna need it!

Build a blanket fort to sleep in - Unlike a tent, a blanket fort can come in any shape, size, or color! And when it comes to building a blanket fort, the only rule is: THERE ARE NO RULES! Feel free to incorporate pillows, couch cushions, bungee cords, and chip clips into your design!

Turn out the lights and turn up the headlamps - Add some mystery to your overnight indoor camping adventure by eliminating light from all sources except for headlamps, rechargeable lanterns and flashlights! Maybe venture on an overnight hike through the hallway and into the bathroom!

Turn up the sounds of nature - An overnight camp-in wouldn't be complete without the synthetic sounds of nature. Use a sound machine or app to invite some chirpy crickets or croaking frogs to your ears. And every now and then yell "CRICKETS! WILL YOU PLEASE GIVE IT A REST! WE'RE TRYING TO SLEEP HERE!"

Lions and tigers and bears! Oh My! - What could be more exciting than the addition of some added danger and drama! Gather all of the wildlife stuffed animals you can find, and place them around your tent. Pretend to be terrified!

Go Fish! (in the bathtub) - When you're camping in the great indoors, the bathroom is the only body of water you're sure to come across. Construct a fishing pole out of some string with a paper clip attached to the end of it like a hook, and GO FISH! See how many invisible fish you can catch!
